MediaWell

News Item

YouTube fights mail-in voting misinformation ahead of Election Day | The Verge

By Russell Brandom
September 24, 2020

> YouTube is stepping up its measures against misinformation around the upcoming US election. In a blog post today, the platform announced an array of new changes, including changes to the search results for presidential and congressional candidates, which will now have authoritative information panels about a candidate ahead of video search results.
>
> “As we approach November 3, we’re working hard to make YouTube a more reliable source for news and information, as well as an open platform for healthy political discourse,” said Leslie Miller, YouTube’s VP of government affairs and public policy, in a post announcing the changes.
>
> […]

Source: YouTube fights mail-in voting misinformation ahead of Election Day – The Verge