MediaWell

News Item

As Covid-19 Vaccinations Ramp Up, Hesitancy Wanes | WSJ

By Randy Yeip
March 30, 2021

> A shrinking percentage of Americans are expressing reluctance to get a Covid-19 vaccine, a positive sign for the efforts to get shots in the arms of enough people to reach herd immunity.
>
> The findings come from the latest release of a large-scale survey conducted by the U.S. Census Bureau and developed in concert with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the National Center for Health Statistics. The most recent survey gauged responses from nearly 80,000 adults between March 3 and March 15.
>
> The survey found about 17% of adults said they would either definitely or probably not get vaccinated, down from 22% in January. The decline was almost entirely due to fewer respondents saying they probably won't get the shot; the share saying they definitely won't has remained essentially unchanged in the past two months.
>
> […]

Source: As Covid-19 Vaccinations Ramp Up, Hesitancy Wanes | WSJ