

Scientists and vaccine trial participants are tackling misinformation on TikTok | The New York Times

By Christina Morales

December 2, 2020

While some in the creative community on TikTok joke about the coronavirus vaccine or tease people who are part of the anti-vaccine movement, scientists and coronavirus vaccine participants are hoping to be a source to fight misinformation on the app.

In February, a scientist who goes by Dr. Noc on TikTok started noticing a need for science-based videos about the coronavirus that his expertise in working to develop an antibody treatment for Covid-19 could help provide.

[...]

Source: California's Governor Warns of 'Drastic Action' as Hospitals Near Crisis - The New York Times