

Can Trump's daily disinformation show be saved? Yes — turn it into a vector for the truth | Salon

By Dan Froomkin

March 27, 2020

The nation's most eminent media critics are virtually unanimous that television networks should stop the live broadcasting of the White House's daily coronavirus briefings, which Donald Trump has turned into a torrent of dangerous lies, misinformation and self-aggrandizement.

I totally agree that the broadcast networks shouldn't break into regular programming to show the briefings live anymore. Watching them, unfiltered, makes their viewers dumber and less safe.

But I think the cable news networks would do well to keep the cameras rolling live — as long as they make some major changes in presentation. And I mean major.

[...]

Source: Can Trump's daily disinformation show be saved? Yes — turn it into a vector for the truth | Salon