

China Social Credit System, Punishments and Rewards Explained | Business Insider

By Alexandra Ma

April 13, 2018

The Chinese state is setting up a vast ranking system system that will monitor the behaviour of its enormous population, and rank them all based on their “social credit.”

...

Like private credit scores, a person’s social score can move up and down depending on their behaviour. The exact methodology is a secret — but examples of infractions include bad driving, smoking in non-smoking zones, buying too many video games and posting fake news online.

Source: China social credit system, punishments and rewards explained | Business Insider