

CIP seeks nominations for 2021 'Award for Excellence' | Center for an Informed Public

By Center for an Informed Public

February 23, 2021

The University of Washington's Center for an Informed Public on Tuesday announced a new award program that will recognize an individual or organization that has made outstanding contributions, achievements, or bodies of work that significantly resist strategic misinformation, promote an informed society, and strengthen democratic discourse.

The CIP Award for Excellence, which will highlight those making a positive impact in mitigating the challenges of mis- and disinformation, will come with a $5,000 award for the winner. The recipient of the award will receive a commemorative plaque and is invited to visit the center and give a talk on their work. The award will recognize work in one or more of four categories: research, education, engagement, or law and policy.

[...]

Source: CIP seeks nominations for 2021 'Award for Excellence' | Center for an Informed Public