

Coronavirus: How China's propaganda machine is telling the story | The Telegraph

By Sophia Yan and Duarte Dias

March 5, 2020

As the novel coronavirus spread, Chinese authorities were reprimanded for censoring information in an attempt to control what was known – part of what contributed to what experts now criticise as a botched initial response.

Now that Covid-19 has gone global, Chinese state-owned media reshaping the narrative by displaying in full force its efforts to combat the virus, including the work of doctors and military to stop the virus and cure patients.

Watch the above video as China correspondent Sophia Yan explains how the propaganda machine has kicked into gear.

[...]

Source: Coronavirus: How China's propaganda machine is telling the story | The Telegraph