This year, DISARM has hosted a series of workshops exploring countermeasures to online harms. The workshop series is generously supported by Craig Newmark Philanthropies. The objective of the workshops is to gather feedback on the types of countermeasures used to counter online disinformation and other harms, and how to make advice on mitigations and countermeasures to these threats accessible and practical to those who need it. The feedback from these sessions will feed into DISARM's work to update and improve the existing 'Blue Framework' of countermeasures.

This workshop focused on what individuals can do to help protect themselves from the threat of online disinformation campaigns and how DISARM can make the 'Blue' Countermeasures Framework more accessible. Participants had experience of working in non-governmental organisations and journalism.
