

Facebook takes down Trump ads for violating organised hate policy | Financial Times

By Hannah Murphy

June 19, 2020

Facebook said on Thursday that it had taken down posts and advertising from Donald Trump's re-election campaign that violate its policy against organised hate, in a move that will irk the US president's team but assuage activists who have called for more policing on the platform.

The world's largest social media group said it had removed numerous posts and adverts after the non-profit group Media Matters noted that some of the ads featured an inverted triangle — a Nazi symbol used to mark political prisoners in concentration camps.

[...]

Source: Facebook takes down Trump ads for violating organised hate policy | Financial Times