

False Political News in Spanish Pits Latino Voters Against Black Lives Matter | The New York Times

By Patricia Mazzei and Jennifer Medina

October 22, 2020

MIAMI — Even by the permissive standards of partisan talk radio, the grave warning from the host of a program on a popular Spanish-language station in Miami one afternoon in September was outlandish.

Carinés A. Moncada, the host, claimed that a co-founder of Black Lives Matter practiced “brujería” — witchcraft.

“So you ask yourself, ‘Why are they destructive?’” she said, referring to protesters who support the Black Lives Matter movement. “Because they are vibrating with the devil. They are vibrating with negativity. They are vibrating with the dark.”

“And whoever votes for Biden, unfortunately, is supporting that,” she concluded.

Source: False Political News in Spanish Pits Latino Voters Against Black Lives Matter - The New York Times