

Job Opening | Policy Director | Data & Society

By Data & Society

July 20, 2020

Today, we announced a job opening for a brand-new position at Data & Society.

We have spent the last six years researching how data-centric technologies and automation affect the world around us, identifying harms to vulnerable communities and working toward more just designs. During this time, all of our teams at Data & Society—research, engagement, events, operations, communications, and strategy—have pursued the life of our research after it is published, giving it every chance to translate into real-world outcomes: we host academic workshops on critical topics; we offer the public events, curated programming, and fellowship programs; and we have raised the visibility of a diverse network of researchers, activists, advocates, storytellers, artists, and many others who, we believe, should be shaping the future of our society. But, as an organization, we are ready to do more.

[...]

Source: Data & Society — Data & Society is Hiring a Policy Director