

Let's fact-check Mark Zuckerberg's fact-checking announcement | Nieman Journalism Lab

By Alexios Mantzarlis

January 15, 2025

On Tuesday, the CEO of a social network born to rate the hotness of college students announced he was taking it back to its roots by “restoring free expression.”

The plan includes relocating Meta's Trust & Safety employees to Texas (this may be a sleight of hand, if most of its moderation staff is already Texas-based) and allowing a little bit more misogyny and homophobia. It also unwinds algorithmic scanning for harmful content that will result in more Meta users getting harassed.

[...]

Source: Let's fact-check Mark Zuckerberg's fact-checking announcement | Nieman Journalism Lab