

Listen: How To Correct Misinformation | NPR

By Yowei Shaw

August 6, 2021

The World Health Organization has called the spread of misinformation around the coronavirus an “infodemic.” So what do you do when it’s somebody you love spreading the misinformation? In this episode, Maddie talks with Invisibilia’s Yowei Shaw about one man’s very unusual approach to correcting his family. And we hear from experts about what actually works when trying to combat misinformation.

For more on how to do science communication right, check out our earlier episode How To Talk About The Coronavirus With Friends And Family.

Email the show at shortwave@npr.org.

Source: How To Correct Misinformation | NPR