News Item

New report looks at AI use in Canadian politics | University of Ottawa

By Michelle Bartleman

February 13, 2024

> As machine learning and artificial intelligence advance become more accessible, political actors are starting to experiment with AI-enabled tools. Whether creating synthetic content, detecting disinformation, tracking harassment or predicting voting outcomes, AI-powered technologies are playing an increasing role in democratic election processes.
>
> [...]

Source: New report looks at AI use in Canadian politics | University of Ottawa