National Institutes of Health Director Dr. Francis Collins said Tuesday that faith leaders can help get more people to be confident in the vaccines.

Getting vaccinated is a "love your neighbor opportunity," he said.

More than 72 million people in the United States have gotten at least one dose of one of the three vaccines authorized by the Food and Drug Administration. Each day more than 2.4 million shots are given, a record. And every state has fully vaccinated at least 10% of their adult population, according to the data compiled by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.
