Media coverage of Covid-19 is constantly shifting and adapting as the Delta variant continues to spread around the globe — and physicians are getting frustrated.

“A lot of what my physicians are expressing frustration about is the fact that we are hearing a lot of press conferences,” radiologist Dr. Nisha Mehta told CNN’s chief media correspondent Brian Stelter on “Reliable Sources” Sunday. “We’re hearing a lot of the same stuff that we’ve kind of heard over the last 18 months.” She added that it “doesn’t help very much” to focus on an official pronouncement that “reiterates the same things” because that doesn’t change behavior.
