

President Trump and social media are super spreaders of misinformation right now, Americans say | Nieman Journalism Lab

By Hanaa' Tameez

October 12, 2020

With just 26 days to go before the United States presidential election — in the middle of a major racial justice movement during a pandemic — U.S. adults are worried that misinformation will influence the results.

In its latest survey in the Trust, Media and Democracy series, Gallup and the Knight Foundation asked 1,269 U.S. adults about misinformation and its effects between September 11 and September 24, before the first presidential debate and President Donald Trump's hospitalization following his positive coronavirus diagnosis. The participants were members of Gallup's probability-based national panel.

[...]

Source: President Trump and social media are super spreaders of misinformation right now, Americans say » Nieman Journalism Lab