

Singapore's fake news law should be a warning to American lawmakers | The Verge

By Casey Newton

December 3, 2019

On Sunday evening, 60 Minutes correspondent Lesley Stahl sat down with YouTube CEO Susan Wojcicki to voice a now-familiar critique: YouTube allows too many dangerous and disturbing videos to remain on the site. She brings up a distorted video of Rep. Nancy Pelosi that falsely describes her as drunk; altered copies of the Christchurch shooting video, quack science, and misleading political ads, among other questionable videos found on the site.

[...]

Source: Singapore's fake news law should be a warning to American lawmakers - The Verge