

Tech Giants Prepared for 2016-Style Meddling. But the Threat Has Changed. | The New York Times

By Kevin Roose, Sheera Frenkel, and Nicole Perlroth

March 31, 2020

SAN FRANCISCO — The day after the New Hampshire primary last month, Facebook’s security team removed a network of fake accounts that originated in Iran, which had posted divisive partisan messages about the U.S. election inside private Facebook groups.

Hours later, the social network learned the campaign of Michael R. Bloomberg, the billionaire former New York mayor, had sidestepped its political ad process by directly paying Instagram meme accounts to post in support of his presidential bid. That same day, a pro-Trump group called the Committee to Defend the President, which had previously run misleading Facebook ads, was found to be promoting a photo that falsely claimed to show Bernie Sanders supporters holding signs with divisive slogans such as “Illegal Aliens Deserve the Same as Our Veterans.”

[...]

Source: Tech Giants Prepared for 2016-Style Meddling. But the Threat Has Changed. | The New York Times