

The Congressional Districts Potentially Most Vulnerable to Facebook Misinformation | Morning Consult

By Joanna Piacenza

December 9, 2019

Misinformation ran rampant on Facebook throughout the 2016 presidential election, and critics remain concerned that the social media giant has not done enough to address the problem.

With the 2020 election approaching, it's worth looking at which pockets of the country could potentially be the most exposed to misinformation — that is, fake news — or disinformation, the deliberate spreading of fake news with the intent to deceive, via the popular platform.

[...]

Source: The Congressional Districts Potentially Most Vulnerable to Facebook Misinformation | Morning Consult