

The riddle of Facebook, fairness and misinformation | The Seattle Times

By Brier Dudley

February 16, 2021

Facebook wants to be everyone's daily newspaper.

That's worked well for Facebook but not the rest of us.

Mark Zuckerberg made this ambition clear in 2013, a year after Facebook went public, when he announced a redesign of its centerpiece News Feed.

"What we're trying to do is give everyone in the world the best personalized newspaper we can," he proclaimed.

Eight years later a majority of Americans — 53%, according to Pew Research Center — turn to Facebook and other social-media for news.

[...]

Source: The riddle of Facebook, fairness and misinformation | The Seattle Times