

The role of misinformation in Trump's insurrection | Brookings

By Darrell M. West

January 13, 2021

Misinformation is a big part of our current polarization because it is hard to bring the country together when each side has its own facts and attributions of responsibility. It helps that some leading social media platforms have limited or banned Trump's posting privileges. But that will not stop the spread of misinformation as Trump likely will move to other sites that have few limits on what he can post. His followers will share falsehoods on their own sites, and misinformation will continue to divide Americans and poison our political environment.

[...]

Source: The role of misinformation in Trump's insurrection