

Trump's FCC wants to rewrite Section 230 and change how social media works | Vox

By Sara Morrison

October 20, 2020

The Trump administration is once again trying to force social media platforms to do its bidding. This time, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) has been tapped to use a law called Section 230 to prevent websites from moderating content in a way that many conservatives believe is biased against them. Despite the law being designed to prevent FCC intervention — and the FCC itself using that as justification not to regulate the internet just a few years ago — it appears the agency is going to try.

[...]

Source: Trump's FCC wants to rewrite Section 230 and change how social media works - Vox