

Twitter aims to limit people sharing articles they have not read | The Guardian

By Alex Hern

June 11, 2020

Twitter is trying to stop people from sharing articles they have not read, in an experiment the company hopes will “promote informed discussion” on social media.

In the test, pushed to some users on Android devices, the company is introducing a prompt asking people if they really want to retweet a link that they have not tapped on.

[...]

Source: Twitter aims to limit people sharing articles they have not read | The Guardian