

U.S. States Will Dominate Tech Policy This Year and Next | Tech Policy Press

By J. Scott Babwah Brennen

February 9, 2023

Earlier this month, President Joe Biden published an op-ed calling for Congress to pass sweeping new legislation regulating technology platforms. Despite this push from the president, the chances of significant new reform in Congress are slim.

But while Congress stalls, the void is likely to be filled by a rush of activity in state capitals. States — not Washington D.C. — are poised to be the critical battlegrounds for tech policy in the next two years.

Source: U.S. States Will Dominate Tech Policy This Year and Next | Tech Policy Press