

When politicians use hate speech, political violence increases | The Conversation

By James Piazza

October 1, 2020

Politicians deepen existing divides when they use inflammatory language, such as hate speech, and this makes their societies more likely to experience political violence and terrorism. That's the conclusion from a study I recently did on the connection between political rhetoric and actual violence.

[...]

Source: When politicians use hate speech, political violence increases